Development of simple data analysis software for the quantitative analysis of XPS spectrum

Hamody Hindi
University of California Berkeley

Simple software has been developed for the quantitative analysis of valence band spectra from SES-100 electron analyzer. The Labview software package has been utilized. Some of fitting routines are also implemented and adapted into software. A simple demonstration of running software and its first application will be given.